1. HAPPY IS A PROBLEM
2. The prince who lives in luxury and does not necessarily feel happy about his luxury, but a life full of suffering teaches us to think and evaluate life that life must face problems, not avoid or run away from problems.
3.
  - Suffering is a natural part of life.
  - Personal responsibility determines the quality of life.
  - The value of life comes from the process, not from comfort.
  - Extremes (luxury or self-torture) are not the solution.
4. This book explains life, teaches that problems can be solved and that everyone has their own set of challenges. This has given me a better understanding of the challenges we face.
5. Your life will be fine if you face problems, not run away from them, and your life is your own responsibility, learning to face problems that come is one of the achievements that makes your life continue.
6. Yes, I will recommend this book to my brothers and sisters
